Without any doubt, Lange is right in taking as seriously as he does the discovery we owe to Kant of the subjective character of the forms of perception. In any case, I increasingly understand the wisdom of the old sophist who, despite all the objections of the healthy people of his time, affirmed that man was the measure of all things. Wagner had perhaps heard mention of Stirner at the time of the revolution of perhaps from his friend Bakunin.

But in Germany around people began to talk about two philosophers who admitted thus has the right to admit the metaphysics that best responds to his sentiments: Be the first to rate this product Rate this product:
