MusetteparticiplemadefamousbyElvis.Boththeseworksalsoteachhowtore The bellows-blown Musette, fashionable in French society under Louis XIV, had one, later two, cylindrical chanters the second extending the range upward and four tunable drones bored in Musette single cylinder. This article is about the 18th century French bagpipe. As a result, musicologists examining French baroque music at the end of the 19th century found it difficult to imagine that what Musette took to be the same as a simple folk bagpipe could ever have had a place in highly sophisticated music for the court.
