In Australian aboriginal lore, a roaring, hairy monster known for jumping out of water holes to terrify passers-by. The first occupants of the house began reporting seeing the ghost of a nun, then a phantom coach and two black horses.
However, when he was questioned about this, her doctor denied her story and Demons come in all sizes, so they can enter and inhabit the bodies of humans and animals, but are inhibited from this by properly-selected charms and they fear fire, water, light, salt, and certain herbs. The price of admission was almost double the regular price of a variety show, and Hanussen also gave very costly personal readings for his customers. He had expensive full-color posters printed up and was soon playing to packed houses.

I am not an adept of this particular order and I prefer the Old School magical tradition. So much of his career was described by himself, it is well to treat it all with some caution.
